SUMMARY

The Architectural/Historic Intensive Level Survey of the Central Park, Jefferson Park, and Paseo neighborhoods proved a success. The survey covered eighty blocks of inner city Oklahoma City. A total of 1408 properties were minimally documented: 339 within the Paseo Neighborhood, 679 in Central Park and 390 in Jefferson Park. Of the 1408 documented properties, 1120 (79.5 %) were determined to be contributing with 277 (19.7 %) classified as noncontributing. Also eight (0.6 %) properties were evaluated as contributing demolished and three (0.2 %) as noncontributing demolished.

In addition, an historic context was developed characterizing the evolution of the neighborhoods. Due to their proximity, each of the districts shared prevailing traits, while unique features served to distinguish the different districts. All three neighborhoods were essentially complete prior to 1930. By that date, eighty-nine percent of Central Park, seventy-one percent of the Paseo neighborhood, and eighty-seven percent of the Jefferson Park district was constructed. Although principally composed of Bungalow/Craftsman style single family dwellings, each neighborhood contained distinctive late 1920s apartment houses.

Within each of the neighborhoods, limited demolition with no subsequent construction has occurred. This is due in part to substandard housing, as well as urban renewal. The largest area in the three neighborhoods affected by demolition is in the Jefferson Park neighborhood. Construction of the Centennial Expressway in the 1980s eradicated numerous structures located east of Robinson Avenue. In addition, several Jefferson Park buildings, located primarily along Walker Avenue, were demolished prior to the survey. Demolition in the Paseo neighborhood focused primarily along Twenty-third Street and Walker Avenue, with sporadic demolition occurring elsewhere. During the course of the survey, eight Paseo properties were identified as being demolished. Three Central Park properties were likewise found to have been demolished over the course of the survey. Other demolition within Central Park has been extremely limited.

Utilizing the above information, the survey defined boundaries for three potential historic districts, Central Park, Jefferson Park and Paseo Neighborhood. Each of the historic districts represent aspects of the history and architecture of the city of Oklahoma City. The period of significance for both the Paseo and Jefferson Park neighborhoods extends from 1905 when the first structures were constructed to 1944. Central Park's period of significance ranges from the earliest enduring construction in 1906 to 1944. Both the Central Park and Jefferson Park districts followed the survey configurations for each neighborhood. The Central Park District boundaries were defined as: beginning at 36th Street and Walker Avenue, south on Walker Avenue to 30th Street, west on 30th Street to Western Avenue, north on Western Avenue to 36th Street, east on 36th Street to staring point. The Jefferson Park District boundaries were determined as follows: originating at 30th Street to the midblock east of Robinson Avenue, south on that line to 23rd Street, west on 23rd Street to Walker Avenue, north on Walker Avenue to 30th Street, east on 30th Street to starting point. Due to encroachment of modern structures and the listing of a portion of the neighborhood, the Spanish Village, on the National Register in 1983, the Paseo Neighborhood boundaries were defined as: beginning at 30th Street and Walker Avenue, south on Walker Avenue to 24th Street, west on 24th Street to Lee Avenue, south to the midblock of 24th Street, west on that line to Guernsey Avenue, north on Guernsey to 24th Street, west on 24th Street to Olie Avenue, south on Olie Avenue to midblock of 24th Street, west on that line to Western Avenue, north on Western Avenue to 30th Street, east on 30th Street to starting point.

All three districts retain a large percentage of their overall integrity. Of the 679 properties documented in Central Park, 570 (84 %) were determined to be contributing. Within Jefferson Park, 322 (82.6 %) of the 390 documented properties were identified as contributing. Four (1.2 %) of these were deemed individually eligible. The total number of properties in the survey-defined Paseo Neighborhood Historic District equalled 319. Of these, 220 (69 %) were classified as contributing.

All properties were documented to the required State Historic Preservation Office standards with completion of a Historic Preservation Resource Identification form and adequate photo documentation. The individual property files will be incorporated into the Oklahoma Landmarks Inventory. Photocopies of the final report, survey maps, and photographs from the individual property files will be provided to the city of Oklahoma City for their use. Additionally, the information was entered on the computer to facilitate its entry into the collective data base of significant Oklahoma and national cultural resources.

In addition to the above achievements, the survey generally increased the area of the state inventoried, and the number of properties identified. This, in turn, will assist in expediting review and compliance activity within one of the state's largest metropolitan areas.
